PLAN FOR MAXIMUM FLEXIBILITY

The room can be opened or closed to the garden depending on the weather, while the arrangement of fitted units around the two side walls creates a large floor space at the centre that can be used for various activities. Space has been saved by integrating appliances such as the barbecue into the fitted units, while an extractor fan means the bbq can be used even in cold weather, when the doors are closed.

AVOID DOOR FRAMES FOR TOTAL TRANSPARENCY

The frameless doors, made from 12mm toughened glass, glide open with only the steel post in the corner interrupting the connection between inside and out. When closed the glazing reflects the garden, making the room feel less prominent. At night, when lit, the shed glows softly, illuminating the surrounding greenery.

INSPIRED IDEAS

CASE STUDY 2

Replace the humble shed with a sleek garden room

Who? David Hingamp of Ar'Chic Architects designed this room for private clients. Where? Camden, London. Why we love it... Erected in just one week for a price tag of £73,000, this snazzy prefabricated garden room provides a flexible space that can be used as a playroom, secondary kitchen, games room, reading room or entertaining space. The frameless glass doors fold back completely to fully integrate the room with the garden while the patio heaters built into the overhanging louvres ensure that it can be used all year round.
